When Mirela first entered Harth & Sons, a family-run bookbindery in Prague, she was told that apprentices were not allowed to touch clients' books during their first month. Instead, they repaired blank practice volumes whose spines had been deliberately weakened. The shop specialized in restoring nineteenth-century travel diaries, but it refused work on books with active mold unless a conservator had already stabilized them. Mirela's first paid assignment was not stitching, as she had expected, but preparing paste made from wheat starch and filtered rainwater. The owner, Anton Harth, insisted that every repair be reversible; for that reason, the shop avoided synthetic glues even when customers requested cheaper, faster work. In her third year, Mirela was permitted to document incoming items, a task previously reserved for Anton's daughter, who had left to study chemistry. By the time Mirela opened her own studio, she still sent rare maps to Harth & Sons because the old shop owned the city's only heated suction table.

5. Mirela는 독립 후에도 희귀 지도를 Harth & Sons에 보냈다.

다음 글에서 주어진 문장이 들어가기에 가장 적절한 곳은?

> However, the label did not mean that the file itself was unimportant.

Archivists at the municipal theater began digitizing costume sketches in 2018. (①) Each sketch was scanned twice: once as a high-resolution preservation file and once as a smaller access copy for researchers. (②) To prevent accidental editing, the preservation files were stored on a server without ordinary staff accounts. (③) The access copies, by contrast, were marked “disposable” in the database because they could be regenerated from the preservation files. (④) Several volunteers misunderstood the word and deleted a group of access copies before a visiting scholar arrived. (⑤) The originals were safe, but the incident forced the archive to rename the category “replaceable access file.”

주어진 글 다음에 이어질 글의 순서로 가장 적절한 것은?

A coastal city introduced “cool roofs” on public buildings, but the first summer report seemed disappointing: electricity use had fallen in some buildings and risen in others.

> (A) The mixed result was not random. Buildings with old air-conditioning systems used less electricity because the roofs reduced indoor heat, while buildings with modern heat-recovery ventilation sometimes used more electricity during cool mornings.

> (B) Therefore, the city changed its evaluation method. Instead of comparing only total summer electricity, it separated midday cooling loads from morning ventilation loads and measured indoor comfort hours.

> (C) The reason was that the reflective surface kept certain rooms cooler than the ventilation system expected, so the system reheated incoming air to maintain its programmed temperature.

다음 글의 밑줄 친 부분 중, 어법상 틀린 것은?

The survey of urban beekeepers revealed that colonies placed near small community gardens were not always healthier than ① those placed on office rooftops. What mattered more was whether pesticide use in the surrounding area ② had been recorded accurately. The researchers, ③ comparing hive weight, winter survival, and pollen diversity, found that a garden with many flowering plants could still be risky if its managers sprayed at night. Neither the number of nearby trees nor the distance from a park ④ were a reliable predictor by itself. Because several rooftop colonies produced pollen from weeds growing along rail lines, the team warned that "green space" ⑤ should be defined by actual foraging sources, not by map color.

다음 글을 바탕으로 할 때, Avery 박사의 실험에 관한 설명으로 가장 적절한 것은?

Dr. Lena Avery tested whether readers remember a recipe better when ingredients are grouped by function rather than by the order in which they are used. She recruited 96 adults and excluded eight who reported professional cooking experience. The remaining participants were randomly assigned to read one of two versions of the same soup recipe. In the sequence version, ingredients appeared exactly when they entered the pot; in the function version, they were grouped as base, aromatic, thickener, and garnish. After a ten-minute distraction task, participants listed as many ingredients as they could. The function group recalled more categories, but not more total ingredients. Avery concluded that grouping helped readers reconstruct the recipe's structure, not its complete inventory.

1. 전문 조리 경험이 있는 8명은 최종 분석에서 제외되었다.
2. 기능별 제시 집단은 전체 재료 수를 더 많이 회상했다.
3. 두 집단은 서로 다른 수프 레시피를 읽었다.
4. 참가자들은 레시피를 읽은 직후 방해 과제 없이 회상했다.
5. Avery는 순서별 제시가 레시피 구조 재구성에 더 효과적이라고 결론 내렸다.
